RICE CULTURE IN THE FUTURE.—It is believed

by many that the cultivation of rice will never again be carried to the same extent as before the war, on account of the labor heretofore employed not being available. It is no doubt true that it cannot be conducted as it has been, but it does not follow that rice cannot be cultivated in as arge quantities as ever, or that the means of cullarge quantities as ever, or that the means of curtivation are not within the reach of every planter.
We are satisfied that there is no necessity for the planter to throw out a single acre of land, for want of labor, but that the same quantity can be cultivated with one sixth of the hands formerly employed. It was thought that the former worked or within was as near heigh perfect ethod of cultivation was as near being perfec as we could hope to attain; and perhaps with the number of hands the planter was compelled to use, it was; but there not being that compulsion to use, it was; but there not being that compusion to find works for so many now, he may by adopting a different course grow the same quantity, have it better cultivated, and at less expense than before. The writer has lately had the opinion of some of the largest agricultural machinists at the North, to the effect that there is comparatively but little labor performed on a rice plantation that cannot be done by machinery, which will be simple and cheap. They said it would be a very easy matter to construct a machine for cleaning out ditches, which could be operated by two or three hands, cording to the present mode. So, also, with regard to breaking up the land, and with the planting and harvesting. A slight alteration of maing and harvesting. A slight alteration of machines already in use, it was thought, would be all that was required.** A ditching machine would pay for itself in one season, as it could do the work of a number of plantations.****

The writer is one who believes, despite the efforts and teachings of demagogues and pseudo philanthropists, that the negro is running a rapid race to extermination, or at any rate his removal from among us is but a question of time; that another class of laborers will, to a large extent, take his place, who cannot have the climacteric advantages of the negro; but by the introduction of machinery in the cultivation of rice, this disadvantage may be overcome. Whosher this change vantage may be overcome. Whether this change of laborers occur or not, the above suggestion, even in point of utility, is not unworthy of consid-

The Governor being informed of his whereabouts, made a requisition upon the Governor of Alabama, and sent Mr. Vickers for the prisoner. He has been committed for trial at the the October term.—Anderson Intelligencer.

THE CORRESPONDENT of the Baltimore Sun refers to the controversy as to whether the recommendation of the military commission was or was not placed before the President, and says; "Mr. Jounson adheres to his asseveration that this recommendation was not among the papers present ed to him by Judge Hour on the 5th day of July, 1865, when the Executive approval of the sentences was written out by Judge Holl and signed by the President. Mr. Johnson further says that the sheets on which the court record was written were fastened together by an eyelet; and as showing that the recommendation for commutation must have been separated and lept in a different place from the balance of the record, reference is made to PITTMAN's official account of the trial, which has no mention of the reommendation of the Court, though it purports to gives copies of all papers connected with the case. LETTER FROM THE COUNTRY.

ATHENS, GA., August 12. Mr. Editor.—It is an unpleasant, and, I fear, a thankless task, to bring the short comings of our railroad managers to their attention, or to that of the public. But there are times and seasons when this must be done. There are occasions when one's bile rises, and it is impossible to resist the impulse to cast it off. Read now the following communications from an Augusta paper, and say if it is not enough to make a man mad who is using every means, by personal influence and money, to direct cotton, and consequently trade, to Charleston, to have the South Carolina Railroad stigmatized as the "tortoise line," and to have it cast in his teeth everywhere that this Company is an old "fogy concern" and "utterly behind the times?" It is evident something is wrong, and plain talk may help to effect a cure. For instance, the world is told that there is a night train on the South Carolina Road, taking passengers from Charleston to Augusta; but they are not told that this "night train" is a freight train. They are not told that the car is a perfect disgrace to any Company, and that full fare is charged to parties who wish to reach Augusta at the expense of such a wrenching and pounding as the Spanish Inquisition never inflicted. They are not told that this wretched affair stops four miles from Hamburg to let the down train pass, and by this outrageous plan passengers for the Georgia Road are compelled to stay in Augusta a day. Shamel shamel on such management. Will our people, one and all, never learn that the world is rushing on, and that we must wake up or be distanced in the race. But this is not all. Travellers from this direction are almost all going to New York by the way of Atlanta, Chattanoogs Knoxville, and to avoid the South Carolina Road and the arrangements that now exist. This mornng, going down to Lexington, there were six persons who were taking this route and not one going by the old way. It seems to me that a hint of these things ought to be enough to bring about a correction. I have heard, too, bitter complaints of certain officers of the South Carolina Railroad, who, it is said, with great earnestness, are more interested in their private affairs than in the true interests of the Company. This ought to be looked into. If the statement is a slander it ought to be refuted-if it is true, then the Directors should apply the correction, and that without delay. Of my own knowledge I can give no testimony, but the stories are too common to be treated with silence. But enough of this matter for the present. Georgia is a noble State, and has done noble things, not the least of which is the appropriation of three hundred dollars to each maimed soldier who desires to procure an education. Our State appropriated money for legs and arms, one-half of which will be found to be useless, and the money given to the artist who made them. Here in this beautiful place are gathered nearly one hundred men, maimed by loss of a leg or arm, and at the High School are receiving such an education as their tastes and abilities warrant. Some of these men could barely read when they came, but they are earnest men, they feel their want, and they are determined to succeed. Some of them are excellent scholars, and I venture the prediction that among them will be found men who will hereafter shine in the professions, and who will take high rank among the intellects of the age. In the University here thore are also two or three maimed men who stand well in their classes, and bid fair

Cxops all through this section are looking beau-tifully, and I find a better feeling as to the future among the planters and merchants. A. B. C. GEORGIA VS. SOUTH CABOLINA RAILBOAD. MR. EDITOR: An article in the Charleston Mercury, of yesterday, casts undue reflections on the Georgia Railroad and its able managers, Judge much delayed by the President. cause the mail train on the Georgia Railroad do t with a freight train on South Carolina heard of a through mail train on one road changing its schedule to make connections with a freight train on another road? The idea is a prepostorous absurdity. Colonel Cole has done everything in his power, and is now more than willing to do anything possible to accommodate the South Carolina Railroad and the Charlestoninns, the assertions of the Mercury to the contrary notwithstanding. By his skillful management and far-seeing qualities, the stock of the Company has gone up from sixty-seven to ninety-one since May; and that, too, in the summer months, which all know to be the dullest season in the year. On the other hand, the officials of the South Carolina other hand, the officials of the South Carolina Road, with a dogged pertinacity, have failed to enter into proper arrangements for close connections. Witness the trains bearing the letters "W. & M. R. R.," on the other side of the river. Why are those cars there? When all the roads south of Richmond, Va., to New Orleans, La., adopted a schedule by which close connection were to be made and faster time, the South Carolina road persistently refused to run the schedule. President Drane, of the Wilmington and Manchester road, proposed if the South the schedule. Fresident Drane, or the wiming-ten and Manchester road, proposed if the South Carolina road would put their operators on at Kingsyille, he would send his trains through. This seems strange, but it is absolutely true. For fur-ther proof, if any is necessary, I refer all interest-ed to the following card, which appeared in a city paper of this morning. It is presumed the writer paper of this morning. It is presumed the writer fully comprehends the situation, and knows where-of he speaks.

for usefulness.

Angusta, Ga., August 9, 1867.

Messrs. Editors: Your columns have recently disclosed several facts in connection with the rapid transmission of goods from the "Great Central," via South Carolina Railroad. In one instance you copy an article from an Atlanta paper (and the same was transferred to the Charleston Mercury), citing a case where goods were received at the "Gate City" on Wednesday, or to quote, "three days from date of shipment." Our friends in Atlanta may be among the favored, but so far as Augusta is concerned, it works reversely. One shipper to this point, who has faithfully tried the two routes (i. e. Savannah and Charleston) can testify that so far as Augusta is concerned, time and greenbacks can be saved by shipping yia Savannah. The writer hereof has, in no instance, received freight shipped from New York on Saturday before the following Thursday, There may be exceptions to this experience, although the result of a trial of four weeks leads one to imagine that the "tortoise line" is not fully up, to the times.

What the Indians are Doing The Omaha correspondent of the Chicago Republican gives the following sensible view of the present attitude of the Indians on the plains: "General Dodge, judging from his letter regarding the killing of Brown, thinks that there is nothing left but to turn to and thoroughly whip the Indians. His experience on the frontier is great, and his conclusions usually sound, but possibly in this case his indignation at the sacrifice of Brown's life may have colored his opinion somewhat. However that may be, there are many other people on this frontier who are rejuctant to come to However that may be, there are many other peo-ple on this frontier who are reluctant to come to that conclusion, but who say that they foar it that conclusion, but who say that they pair it must come to a war. At this time the state of the case among the Sioux seems to be this: The young men and the young chiefs (and they are the most influential) say that there is nothing for them to do but to fight until the whites consent to sheets on which the court record was written were not fastened together when presented to him, but the whole matter has since been made up and and all of the older chiefs are desirous to prevent a war, indeed have taken, in some cases, extreme massures to keep the young men from going out in war parties. These old men, in times past, have fett and know the power of the Government, and believe that in the extreme case their people will be exterminated by the whites, but the expe-rience of the younger ones has not taught them this, as since that time they have almost invariably beaten the troops,

"The young mon of the Sioux are out in small parties, rarely numbering more than five or six, but sometimes combining for a few days several parties, whose object seems to be simply their. Of course, if white men stand in the way of their success in that line, and they find it impossible, they will kill, but they are not what they call "upon the war-path." They kill only when necesfoolish emigrant puts his soalp within their easy reach, when the temptation becomes too strong, and they take it, even if they get nothing else with it.

"Many of the people who cross the plains seem to think that because Indians are not seep there War, through the Judge Advocate General, I have superintended the compilation and publication in book form, &c., &c., &c., and hereby certify to its faithfulness and accuracy." No copy of the paper in question being found in the book, Mr. Johnson takes Burnerr's certificate as corroborative of the theory that the recommendation for commutation was not placed with other parts of the record until long after the trial, and consequently he could not have had it before him when the sentences were approved.

To think that because Indians are not seep there are none about, and every now and then some man or woman on whom caution and advice are wasted, goes out a few miles from camp, hunting perhaps, and presently inds more Indians than are beneficial to his health, and away goes his scalp. Not improbably from this very train, in a few days, another one will be lost in the same way, and simply because these people, in their self-sufficient ignorance, scorn the counsel of men who have for years travelled the plains and neglect the simplest precautions without which an old plainsman would no sooner travel than he would commit suigide. [From the New York Evening Post, of Friday.] Mr. Stanton's Suspension So much power as Congress left in his hands, in regard to his advisers, the President has chosen to exercise, by suspending the Secretary of War from his duties.

In his capacity of Commander-in-Chief of the Army, the President has commanded Gen. Grant to act as Secretary of War ad interim, the interim being probably from this time to the meeting of Congress.

While we are sorry to see Mr. Stanton out of the Cabinet, where he has long been very useful, we hold that the chief Executive must, in the general interest and for the proper administration of public service, have the control of his subnates. If he uses his power and place to de defeat the laws, Congress can impeach and remove him; and if Congress does not chose to exercise that constitutional power, then the people at the next election can punish the delinquent officer by decreeing his removal and putting a better man i his place.

At the bottom of all discussion on this subject. At the bottom of all discussion on this subject, and of the constitutional regulations upon it, lies the belief that no man in the Presidential chair can ruin the country in four years; that if he plain-pelled by the people to impeach and remove him; and that if Congress does not act, the people have at the Presidential election power over the whole matter to decide as seems to them best. Thus the country is made and against suprection or the country is made safe against usurpation or corruption, and that without any such injurious limitations of the Executive authority as that which Congress, unwisely, as we think, has

That Mr. Stanton, would accept dismissal at the hands of the President we did not doubt. He has names of the President we did not doubt. He has long been anxious to retire from public service; he has remained in the Cabinet only because he was made to feel that his stay there, while it vexed politicians of both parties, was welcomed to and desired by the people. He has been, no doubt, of great use in the Cabinet, so long as the President did not fasten a quarrel upon or t but when this occurred his useful cause he could no longer hope to influence Mr. Johnson for good, or exercise a restraining power We do not doubt that Mr. Stanton saw this himself; and as, by the attitude of the President, his influence was destroyed, the order of suspension was probably welcome to him.

We perceive that some journals try to bring General Grant into contempt and suspicion, be-cause he has been commanded to take charge, temporarily, of the War Department. But let any one say what Grant was to do. He is a soldier, the highest officer of the army under the Presi-dent. He has obeyed his superior's order, as he was obliged to do. Had he hesitated or refused he would have set an example of insubordination, for which he would have deserved severe punishment He has not resigned his place in the He has not resigned his place in the army; he is still General; he has gone to the War Department, as he would doubtless have gone to Texas, at the President's order. The country is to be congratulated that so true a man holds so important a position. The President has, for his own purposes, chosen to place Grant in what some may think a false position; but for that Grant is not to be an appointment would be too scandalous; it would be a flying in the face of public opinion, such as even Mr. Johnson would scarcely venture upon.

person who, sent by Mr. Johnson to investigate the management of the Freedmen's Bureau, tried to destroy the characters of faithful and honorable officers in his official reports. These reports of his were so false, so devoid of truth, that even the worst enemies of the Freedmen's Lureau were cled to dress them; and the officers whose side plad to drop them; and the officers whose fair ame he tried to stain cleared themselves in every nstance of the wrong imputed to them.

The action of Mr. Johnson has left the public curious to know what may come next. Does he intend to gratify the desires of the obstructionists? people ask. Does he intend to remove Sheridan, Pope and Sickles? It is not likely. He could have removed them without removing Mr. Stanton. The President, in such a matter, is not subject to the authority or interference of the not subject to the authority or interference of the Secretary. But it is scarcely worth while to spec-ulate about Mr. Johnson's intentions. He has shown himself, so often, tricky, and given to un-derhand, inconsequent, and what may fairly be called mean actions, that it is not useful to specu-late about what he may do hereafter; nor do we called mean actions, that it is not useful to spect-late about what he may do hereafter; nor do we think it very important. He will probably delay, as much as he can, the work of reconstruction, and thus keep the country in a turnoil. But that work has now gone so far that it can scarcely be must see that they have little to hope from the help of a President who has a very large majority against him in Congress, and whom even the minority does not trust or respect. Mr. Johnson has so managed affairs that he has lost the con-fidence and respect of Democrats as well as Re-publicans in the Northern States; and his chief advisers and friends now are of the class of old pro-slavery politicians of the South, of whom he said during the war, that the country could never have peace until they were put aside and new me brought forward in their places.

FROM THE SOUTHAMPTON (July 25) Correspondence of the London Star, we learn that the American life-raft Nonpareil, forty three days from New York, arrived here between five and six o'clock this evening, and is moored off the dock shore. This daring adventure has been conducted by JOHN MIKES, Captain, and a crew of two, named GEORGE MILLER and JERRY MALLENE. She is only twenty-four feet long, and twelve and a half feet broad. The raft which has two masts, consists of three cylinders, pointed at each end, united together by canvass connections, having no real deck, and is strengthened by boards slipped under strong iron neck-pieces, the whole kept together by lashing. A water proof cloth, hung over a boom, closed at each end, somewhat resembling a gypsy tent, affords sleeping accommodations, two at a time, and the third keeping watch. This is fixed on a strong locker, in which the provisions are kept. The raft lay-to seven times from stress of weather, and the last vessel spoken was the John Chapman, a week since, from which they were given a fowl, which is still alive and well, They have arrived with thirty gallons of water to spare. The Captain was poorly two days during the passage, otherwise all have been in perfect health, and the men are in good spirits, their countenances looking healthy and bronzed by the weather. They had no chronometer on board, and sailed by dead reckoning, and corrected their position by vessels they spoke. There is a smaller raft on deck for use as a boat. The raft has kept perfectly water-tight all the way, not a leak of any sort having oc-

A very sharp controversy is going on among emperance men in New York State and others regarding hop growing. Hops, it is argued, are made into beer, which is intoxicating, consequently hop-growers "are identified with the cause of ntemperance, and workers together with Satan in destroying their fellow men." It is immoral to raise hops, so it is to raise apples, corn, rye, grapes, carrots, beets, potatoes, &c., for of those severally intoxicating liquor can be distilled. -
